At the cross we see just how much God values his holiness. We see that God will not violate his own holiness even in order to save the ones he loves. Here at the cross we see wrath and mercy meet. We see both of them in their glorious fullness--the ultimate display of God's wrath and the ultimate display of God's mercy.

God's Mercy and God's Wrath Meet at the Cross - Tim Challies

At the cross, God's justice was meted out in full (upon Christ), and God's mercy was extended in full (to all who believe). God's perfect mercy was exercised through His perfect justice. God did not sacrifice Himself to Himself to save us from Himself because of a rule He made Himself.

But to keep us from believing that we must simply choose any arbitrary cross, or simply pick out our suffering as we will, Jesus emphasizes that each of us has his or her own cross, ready, appointed, and appropriately measured by God.1". — Dietrich Bonhoeffer, God Is on the Cross: Reflections on Lent and Easter.

God Is on the Cross Quotes by Dietrich Bonhoeffer

In the Old Testament it is the blood of bulls and goats, in the New Testament it is the eternal blood of Jesus Christ which has eternal value in the eyes of God. When Jesus hung on the cross, he cried out, "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" (Mark 15:34). In that moment all the wrath of God was poured out on Jesus.

Where Grace and Wrath Meet: What the Cross Meant to God ...

In Christianity, the cross is the intersection of God's love and His justice. Jesus Christ is the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world (John 1:29). The reference to Jesus as the Lamb of God points back to the institution of the Jewish Passover in Exodus 12.
